Sri Lanka: Women's Shelters

 Sri Lanka

"In our society, there is a belief that domestic violence should be kept behind closed doors and not discussed openly", says Anoja Makawita, a social worker and counsellor with the Sri Lankan group Women in Need (WIN).

"Violence within families has far-reaching consequences, and it is women and girls who suffer the most", she said. "It is not just an issue within individual households; it has an impact on entire communities." Read more>

According to a 2021 World Bank study amongst refugees in Uganda, refugees are ten times more prone to experience depression symptoms compared to native Ugandans, with incidence much higher among female refugees and the elderly. Read more>

DRC: Services For Congolese Women Vendors

DRC – Democratic Republic of Congo

UN Women and a Congolese women’s civil society organization are helping women market vendors register their businesses, obtain key market support and access state services.

More than 99 per cent of businesses in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) are unregistered. For decades, women vendors have managed their stands informally, exposing themselves to notorious risks, ranging from adverse weather to high transportation costs, complications with the supply of raw materials and even violence when travelling to their stands in the early morning. Malawi: Women And Youth Financial Inclusion

 Malawi

Women and girls in Mzimba district like most parts of Malawi’s rural areas do not have access to financial services, due to persistent barriers in access to identification documents, mobile phones, digital skills, formal education, financial capability, as well as inappropriate products. This is changing with the EU-funded Spotlight Initiative that seeks to use model digital financial products and services to accelerate financial inclusion of women and youth. Read more>
