STRATEGIC NOTE OUTCOME PROGRESS NOTE

SHOWING DATA OF: 2023

Latin America and the Caribbean democratic institutions are strengthened, and States advance towards gender parity in political participation at all decision-making levels

In 2023, this outcome has important progress, even though no new laws or reforms to advance gender balance in decision-making were adopted in the current year, progress was made in setting parity as a key pillar for the strengthening of democracies and the advance of gender equality agendas in the region. UN Women advocated for the full exercise of women's political rights, focusing on the promotion of legal measures and institutional mechanisms to ensure parity representation in decision-measures, a comprehensive mitigation of violence against women in politics, as inclusive political financing, through advocacy, capacity-building and knowledge production initiatives, contributing to build consensus towards parity democracies, including within the Latin American and Caribbean Parliament (Declaration), the Ibero-American Congress of Municipalities (Declaration), as well as the Association of Women Electoral Magistrates of the Americas (Agreements). At country level, progress was made especially in Uruguay in support to the legislative debate on the parity bill, which is expected to be considered by parliament in March 2024. Both through coordinated UN System's advocacy, as through UN Women specific technical assistance and incidence within sessions of the Commission on Human Rights and Gender Equality of the Senate, arguments in favor of a parity law were strengthened.
