Stakeholders (CSOs, private sector, academia, media, UN, etc.) mobilize and present key actions that will fuel progress on GEWE by 2025

UN Women and Gender at Work are working to deepen our commitment to strengthen action coalitions through building feminist youth leadership. UN Women is working with an existing network of youth leaders, national gender youth activists, feminist organisations and practitioners, researchers, activists, to map critical questions around the criteria for feminist leadership and core challenges to young leaders to step up as feminist leaders in their spaces. In addition, UN Women and National Association of Women's Organisations (NAWO) collaborated to convene an intergenerational space, where a common vision on feminist futures is discussed between young and older feminists and to strengthen young feminist jurisprudence through partnership and collaboration between feminist organizations. The proposal included work on programme structure, timelines, content, and standard operational procedures necessary for an inter-generational transition in women's leadership within NAWO's organisational structure. UN Women developed 8 policy briefs in partnership with CBGA on 2 Action coalition themes.
