Women lead preparedness for and response to natural disasters (FPI GIR Outcome 4)

OUTCOME DETAILS

SDG alignment

Impact areas

Women, peace and security, humanitarian action and disaster risk reduction

Organizational outputs

Positive social norms

Women's voice, leadership and agency

Policy Marker

GENDER EQUALITY

Humanitarian Scope

Yes

UN System Function

Outcome Description

The focus will be to build the capacity of and support Pacific women so that they can lead preparedness for, and respond to, natural disasters. It will entail the strengthening of the capacity of gender machineries, CSOs and service providers to lead and contribute to humanitarian preparedness and response, and especially by ensuring that it is gender-responsive and inclusive.

SHOWING DATA OF : 2022

Women lead preparedness for and response to natural disasters (FPI GIR Outcome 4)

Progress has been made in strengthening the capacity of organisations to lead and contribute to humanitarian preparedness and response through UN Women's regional response covering several countries in the Pacific. Women-led organizations from Fiji, Solomon Islands and Vanuatu have strengthened their knowledge and skills and are now more confident to lead in any emergency response after their meaningful participation in trainings, workshops, and meetings covering topics such as Gender in Humanitarian Action (GiHA) and Gender Based Violence in Emergency (GBViE) that were co-facilitated by UN Women and relevant Government ministries across the three countries. In 2022, UN Women expanded its reach to the Northern Pacific to support organizations in humanitarian preparedness and response work. This has resulted in organisations in Palau having increased knowledge and skills on GiHA, GBViE through a dedicated training opportunity provided to the Palau Red Cross and its partners.
