SHOWING DATA OF: 2023

Women and women’s organizations lead, participate and advocate effectively in the Syrian political process from a gender and women’s rights perspective

The Women’s Advisory Board (WAB) could better participate in and effectively advocate for women and women’s organizations inclusion in the Syrian political process. The WAB orchestrated high-level meetings in The Hague, Geneva, and Rome, fostering collaboration with key stakeholders. Through participation in the EU-led Brussels Conference, the WAB members had also amplified messages on the importance of Syrian women’s participation in early recovery processes in Syria. To support the WAB’s role, UN Women provided technical and financial support and facilitated the organization of WAB meetings in partnership with the Office of the Special Envoy to Syria. UN Women ensured UN System actors could better integrate gender considerations into humanitarian activities, setting a precedent for effective gender-responsive efforts as a result of UN Women chairing the Gender Working Group in the cross-border operation. Women-led organizations and activists, operating inside and outside Syria, gained necessary skills for meaningful participation through capacity-building initiatives, including training sessions and workshops. Stakeholders could engage in more informed advocacy using knowledge products, such as gender analyses and studies on women’s roles in local mediation.
